Course Description

PHR-120 Introduction to Religion is a study of major themes in religious and theological thought. Topics of discussion include the nature and existence of God; the relationship between God, humanity, and the universe; human nature and the human condition; religious responses to the problems of human existence; and the relationship between religion and society.

3 lectures, 3 credits

General Education Course – Humanities Elective

Student Learning Objectives: As a result of meeting the requirements in this course, students will be able to

1. describe the role of religious inquiry in the human search for knowledge and meaning and its contribution to the formation of our most fundamental values;
2. analyze critically the relationship of religion to culture and society;
3. differentiate the study of religion from other disciplines;
4. take an empathetic yet critical approach to the study of religion and the religious state of mind;
5. view religion from a variety of perspectives, such as the sociological, philosophical, or psychological;
6. explain the relevance of religious studies with reference to the major problems of contemporary culture; and
7. state and support their own views on religious issues, both orally and in writing, and with logical and critical precision, clarity, and rigor.

In pursuit of the foregoing objectives, the course will be based on the reading and discussion of primary and secondary sources, the basic principles and methods of logical reasoning will be introduced, the techniques of scholarly research and writing will be reviewed, and students will be required to do a substantial amount of expository and critical writing in response to the material presented in the course.

The Student Learning Objectives (SLOs) in this course are intended to be aligned with as many of the college's Core Competencies and General Education Goals as possible. They are also correlated with the overall Learning Goals of the Religion Program. In addition, student progress in reaching the course's SLOs is to be assessed through a variety of assessment types (tools) and on the basis of a variety of assessment criteria. These alignments and correlations are depicted in the attached document. [Back to course listing]

Course Content

Along with PHR-120, Bergen's course offerings in Religion include PHR-121 Religions of the World, PHR-122 Women and Religion, PHR-124 The Bible and Christianity, and PHR-125 The Bible and Judaism. Because PHR-124 and PHR-125 are not general education courses, most students who enroll in Religion courses choose PHR-120, PHR-121, or PHR-122. Some of these students will take both of these courses. It is especially important that PHR-120 have a distinct identity from PHR-121. Although most instructors in PHR-120 will include some discussion of specific religious traditions, PHR-120 should not be essentially a comparative study of religion. Rather, PHR-120 is an introduction to the discipline of religious studies.

Special Features of the Course (if any) [to be designated by the instructor]

E.g., the use of learning technologies in the course (Internet, PowerPoint, etc.); the inclusion of technological literacy and/or information literacy learning in the course; etc.

Writing and Critical Thinking Requirement(s)

Because PHR-120 is a General Education course, it requires students to complete a variety of critical thinking and writing assignments. These assignments may include class discussions and debates requiring the application of critical thinking skills, short in-class essays, out-of-class writing projects (journals, research papers, argument-analysis papers, book reviews, etc.), tests and examinations containing essay components, and so forth. Instructors will respond to and comment on students' writing in detail.

Grading Policy

A student's final grade for the course is based primarily on his or her performance on the required work for the course (writing assignments, examinations, class presentations, etc.) and on his or her overall mastery of the material covered in the course. A student's class participation may also be evaluated, and the grade thereon may be used as a factor in determining the student's final grade for the course; but a class participation grade will count for no more than fifteen percent (15%) of the final grade.

Attendance Policy

BCC Attendance Policy:

All students are expected to attend punctually every scheduled meeting of each course in which they are registered. Attendance and lateness policies and sanctions are to be determined by the instructor for each section of each course. These will be established in writing on the individual course outline. Attendance will be kept by the instructor for administrative and counseling purposes.

Philosophy and Religion Departmental Attendance Policy:

Students are expected to attend class regularly and punctually. Attendance will be taken at each class session. It is expected that class will be conducted such that students will benefit in their written work by the lectures and class discussion. If students occasionally arrive late, they should be encouraged to enter quietly, not disturbing the class. If students miss class, they should be encouraged to use the course calendar to stay abreast of material. It is probably a good idea for students to find study partners and to exchange telephone numbers. Make-ups for examinations should be allowed by the instructor if, in the instructor's judgment, the student has presented a good excuse for missing the work. Instructors may penalize work which is late; however, the instructor's policies for make-ups and late work must be clearly specified on the student guide.

Course Texts and/or Other Study Materials

There are many introduction to religion texts available. Most instructors will likely want to build their course around some general introductory level text book. However, it is strongly recommended that instructors also choose a reader or one or two classic texts about religion to be used in conjunction with the textbook. Because religious studies are inevitably multicultural, texts should be chosen which are not limited solely to a Western tradition. Two standard texts are the following:

Schmidt, Roger. Exploring Religion. Wadsworth, 2d ed., 1988.

Livingston, James C. Anatomy of the Sacred: An Introduction to Religion. Prentice-Hall, 5th ed., 2004.

Further, an instructor may wish to build the course around one particular critical approach to religion, say, the philosophy of religion, or the sociology of a religion, or religion and literature. If so, appropriate primary sources should be chosen. One instructor based his section of PHR-120 on the following four paperback books: Rudolph Otto, The Idea of the Holy; William James, The Varieties of Religious Experience; Wolfhart Pannenberg, What is Man?; and Jean-Paul Sartre, Existentialism is a Humanism.

Logos – The BCC Philosophy Club

Logos usually meets on Tuesdays during the Activities Period, 12:30-1:25 PM, in Room L-342. I encourage you to join the club. Since you are interested in the study of philosophy, you should find the meetings and other activities of the philosophy club very interesting. For further information, check the Philosophy & Religion bulletin board adjacent to Room L-325A or contact LOGOS Advisor, Dr. Vanda Bozicevic (L-331, 201-493-7528, vbozicevic@bergen.edu). (LOGOS does not hold regular meetings during the summer.)

Include a Course Outline and Calendar [can be combined in a single syllabus section]

The Course Outline and Calendar must include all of the following elements:

- A daily or (at least) weekly schedule of topics to be covered.
- Dates for exams, quizzes, or other means of assessment. (This does not mean that all evaluation of students must be in groups and at the same time. Exams and other means of assessment can be listed as "to be scheduled individually.")

- Due dates for major assignments – e.g., when is a paper due; if the topic has to be approved, when; if an outline or draft is an interim step, when it is due.
- Any required special events must be included in the outline/calendar, e.g., a lecture by a visiting speaker, a dramatic or musical performance, a field trip.
- Designation of Student Learning Objectives – by number – for each topic (see sample below).
- A note to students stating that the course outline and calendar is tentative and subject to change, depending upon the progress of the class.
